

You as a Collaborative Leader (YACL)

A Collaborative Leadership Development Opportunity to support health and social care integration.

We are excited to announce that another cohort of this popular leadership programme will be running again in Autumn 2026.

YACL is a programme for health and social services professionals working in integration, to develop the skills and knowledge to lead effectively across integrated settings where effective collaboration is essential.

YACL is an interactive learning programme comprising a mix of self-directed learning, reflective practice, online workshops, smaller online peer thinking groups and 1:1 coaching and will take place over three months between September 2026 – November 2026.

This programme offers opportunities to:

- Reflect on how to lead collaboratively without relying on formal authority
- Strengthen influence through cross sector relationships rather than positional power
- Increase system awareness and learn from leaders and peers working across integrated health and social care settings
- Engage in your own reflective practice and peer review live challenges brought by fellow participants

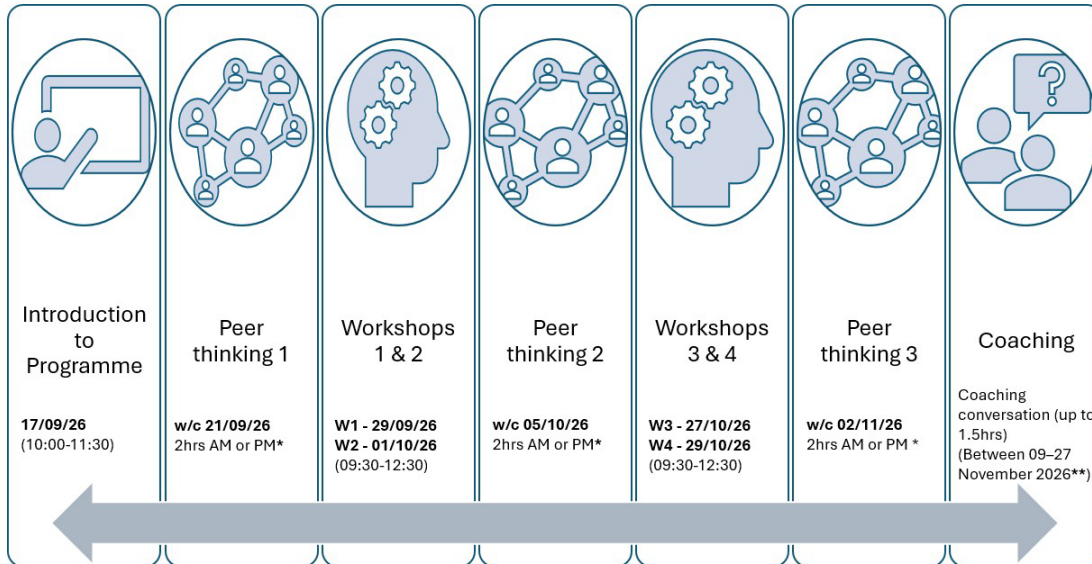

2025 YACL Participant Feedback

“Do it! It is great opportunity to develop and learn new skills as well as collaborate and network with colleagues from across the sectors”

“An intense but short course on identifying personal leadership strengths and areas for improvement, theory of leadership and how to collaborate with others even when there are complex issues”.

Participants must be able to attend ALL dates on the Programme which are detailed below.
